Bookmark this! Scientific Article Database Available on the Web

The scientific article database that was launched early in 2002 on the International HACCP Alliance's web site is still available to help the meat and poultry industry obtain credible scientific supporting data for HACCP plan decisions. There are approximately 400 articles in the database, which can be searched by key words and phrases. We welcome and encourage you to provide input on additional information and resources.

For example, if you are searching for a particular article and cannot find it, let us know and we will try to help locate the article.

The idea behind the database originated through the Education Committee meeting of the National Meat Association and Kerri Harris has led the database project in cooperation with Jeff Savell, Meat Science Section Leader in the Department of Animal Science, and his graduate students at Texas A&M University. If you have any questions about the database, please contact Tiffany Mooney or Misty Skaggs in the International HACCP Alliance office. The web address for the scientific article database is <http://haccpalliance.org/sciencelibrary.html>
