Deven Scott Retires from NAMP

Deven Scott, for many years the executive vice president of North American Meat Processors (NAMP) and also chairman of the International HACCP Alliance, retired on October 21 during NAMP's convention in San Antonio, Texas. Deven and his wife Judith are relocating to North Carolina. Upon the retirement of Deven Scott, Marty Holmes assumes the position of executive vice president of NAMP.

As chairman for the International HACCP Alliance, Deven's unwavering leadership has brought the Alliance into the forefront of standardizing HACCP training and developing a uniform position on implementing HACCP in the meat and poultry industry. We extend our best wishes to Deven and Judith for a most enjoyable retirement and many happy rounds of golf.
